Applications are open for this spring’s Cuban Social Issues course, an 8-day study abroad opportunity for graduate students in the School of Social Work. Up to 10 participants will attend two course meetings on campus during the spring semester, and then travel to Havana and other sites in Cuba over spring break. Course content includes Cuban experiences with race, the history of U.S. relations, health and mental health care systems, and social support programs. Course assignments include reading reflections, engaged participation, and a final paper.

Approximate cost: $2049
Application deadline: November 14, 2019
To apply and for more information visit: www.abroad.pitt.edu/cubansocialpolicy
Questions? Contact crsp@pitt.edu or call 412-624-7379